MISS L. DORSEY'S MILLINERY
513 Broadway, New York.

May 21, 1845.

" Miss Dorsey's Heightening of Beauty. Called up to guide a country relative to the fountains of personal embellishment, a few days since, we led the way first, of course, to the tempting chateau factory of Miss Dorsey. It is difficult for those who have only been accustomed to look on bonnets whose destiny is decided, to look on them now, and to believe them incapable of having, to those who wear them, they will be grace and beauty, inseparable from the form they embellish. It is strange, how much more exquisite these caps and bonnets are, than most of what one sees worn—strange, because we should suppose no lovely woman would inhabit a universe where such things were, without finding means to possess them. It is worth a curious man's while to get his aunt, or some body, to take him to this repository of charming things. We came away wondering at Miss Dorsey's inexhaustibleness of inventive fancy.

" Lamps to Burn Camphene."

HORN'S PATENT SOLID BOTTOM GLASS FOUNTAIN LAMP, for Camphene or Mineral Oil, has been universally celebrated and sold after, as the most perfect "Lamps" ever invented. They meet the approval and praise of all who use them.

Tell all others, but do not fail to try the heat, the cheapest, and above all, the Lamps" will give the greatest light with the least expense. They are the most simple and easy to manage and trim, cannot corrode or become heated while burning, easily cleaned inside and out, and not affected by a draft or current of air. Half a candle will give as much light as half a dozen candles.
